FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

TO THE AUTHOR OF THE FUGITIVE POEMS.

ACROSTIC.

Hail! sweet bird, that gifted power divine,
A charm to yield, in each exalted strain,
Much, would my verse excel her potent art,
Like thine to cheer, inspire the sad'ning heart.
Rest on my harp should breathe its purest lays,
To sound its worth—like thine secure its praise!

ELLEN.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Lines inscribed to Miss R——n.

May the bright smile of friendship illumine thy path,
While gliding on life's troubled ocean,
And thy hours there purely with pleasure and bliss,
Undisturb'd by sorrow's emotion.

May hope prompt cheer on the light of thy smile,
And shed its bright halo before thee;
For let there remain as pr s nt as there are,
A beam still is fore to adore thee.

And never! oh, never! while life proudly glows,
May thy bosom be troubled with sorrow,
But as free from a pang as thy smile is to-day,
May it rise in beauty to morrow.

I'll gaze on thee dearest, unseen and unknown,
I'll follow thy footsteps to love and adorn;
'Tis the pure flame of friendship that burns in my breast
That virtue alone can inspire.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

TO A LADY

Who desired me to write some lines on her Friend's marriage, and upon my declining asked for the reason.

Nay, ask me not—my humble lyre
Cannot breathe forth notes of gladness;
The joy its notes did once inspire,
Now it only sounds in sadness;
With a the thief in wretched life,
Who tears must then unbidden die;
One if e'er he chanceth doth sing,
Songs of sorrow he must sing.

Nay ask me not, where is the beam
Of mirth that once did light my brow?
All say he was but a dream,
That fancy had raised now;
No it never can return
Till the dismal dark cease to harbor
Dark thoughts—fancies which did destroy,
All my budding hopes o joy.

Pray my title, oh! Lady fair—
Judge if then my harp could ring
With a thoughtless, youthful air,
Such as happy minstrels sing:
I have loved, but how requited
By the maiden that delighted
My young ardent soul—but hear
In my tale—list Lady fair;

You have seen the young fresh rose,
As in silver dew it shone;
You have seen the moon disclose
Her beauties and her spangled zone
As the rose the girl was fair,
And flowing was her auburn hair;
And her eyes, they beamed as bright,
As the summer Queen of Night.

Oft at eve's soul-soothing hour,
We would seek some peaceful grove,
Or some lone sudden rose bower,
Sacred only to our love:
There, where all was calm serene,
And silence hover'd o'er the scene—
When the moon shone a light above,
There we'd breathe our vows of love.

I adored her and believed
That she loved me true, sincerely,
But alas! I was deceived,
Won by her I prized so dearly:
She was mine—the vow she plighted
Which to her high Heaven she plighted;
She did wed my dearly foe,
And filled for me the cup of woe.

Then ask me not to tune my lyre,
To a strain of mirth or gladness;
The joy its notes did once inspire,
Lady, now it sounds in sadness;
I also! in woe do sigh—
My harp must then neglected lie,
Or if e'er its chords I string,
Songs of sorrow I must sing.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

MORNING AIR—Tune, Planxty Kelly.

Sweet the lovely morning air,
Then all the changes of the year;
The surest road to health and ease,
Is daily, duly taking this.
In pensive, musing mood;
For while desponding lovers choose,
The silent eve to wail and muse,
Be mine the morning meditation,
Nurse of joy and resignation,
Which each day,
Light and gay,
Still proves a delightful test,
Convinced that Heaven bestows the best,
And chases care or fear intruder.

Gladness is the morning gleam,
That just precedes the solar beam,
When revealed nature wakes,
Enraptured ere the morning breaks,
Or twilight finds appears,
Delightful 'tis to taste the air,
Before the morning calls to care,
Sweetly thus with Heaven conversing,
While the shades are fast dispersing,
And the day,
Calls away,
From sloth and sleep to health and joy—
Ere man the peaceful scene destroy,
By busy bustling care.

Possessed eve and sleep by day,
May please the Sardanapalian gay,
Yet innocence and peace are found,
Tho where in the chequered round,
Nor health nor life ensure,
And fool discuss disgrace and pain,
With fit Paraleve Gorgon train,
Attend his path, who bows to Vice,
Revelling on to splendid nonsense,
While the day
Is dozed away,
In restless dreams, remorse and pain,
And crowded brow and feverish brain,
To leave the night secure.

FAIREST, SWEETEST, DEAREST.

BY MRS. OPIE.

Say, by what name can I impart,
My wish dear girl, of what thou art?
Nay, though in frown, thou darest,
I'll say thou art of girls the pride;
And she that modest lip may chide;
Mary! I'll call thee—fairest.

Yet no—that can but express,
The soft and winning sweetness,
In which the spirit thou meetest?
But not thy heart, thy temper too,
So good, so ev—n, oh! that will do!
Mary! I'll call thee—sweetest.

But fairest sweetest, him would be,
To speak the love I feel for thee;
Why call'e thou so thou heavest?
"Georgiana," she cried, one little name,
"Is all I wish from thee to claim;
"That precious name is—dearest."

Implicit Faith has been sometimes ludicrously styled fides carbonaria, from the noted story of one who, examining an ignorant Collier on his religious principles, asked him what it was that he believed? He answered, "I believe what the Church believes." The other rejoined, "What then does the Church believe?" He replied readily, "The Church believes what I believe." The other, desirous if possible to bring him to particulars, once more resumed his inquiry, "Tell me then, I pray you, what it is you and the Church both believe?" The only answer the Collier could give, was, "Why truly sir, the Church and I both believe the same thing." This is implicit faith in perfection, and in the estimation of some celebrated doctors the sum of necessity and saving knowledge in Christian.

THE WORM.

——"Out venoms all the worms of Nile."
Shakspeare.

Who has not heard of the Rattle-snake or Copper-head! An unexpected sight of either of these replies will make even the lords of creation coil, but there is a species of worm found in various parts of this state, which conveys a poison of a nature so deadly, that compared with it, even the venom of the rattle-snake is harmless.

To guard our readers against this foe of human kind, is the object of this communication.

This worm varies much in size. It is frequently an inch through, but as it is rarely seen, except when coiled, its length can hardly be conjectured. It is of a dull lead colour, and generally lives near a spring or small stream of water, and hites the unfortunate people who ore in the habit of going there to drink. The brute creation it never molests. They avoid it with the same instinct that teaches the animals of Peru to shun the deadly Coya.

Several of these reptiles have long infested our settlements, to the misery and destruction of many of our fellow citizens.—I have, therefore, had frequent opportunities of being the melancholy spectator of the effects produced by the subtle poison which this worm infuses.

The symptoms of its bite are terrible.—The eyes of the patient become red and fiery, his tongue swells to an immoderate size and obstructs his utterance, and delirium of the most horrid character quickly follows. Sometimes in his madness, he attempts the destruction of his nearest friends. If the sufferer has a family, his weeping wife and helpless infants are no unfrequently the objects of his frantic fury—in a word, he exhibits to the life all the detestable passions that rankle in the bosom of a savage, and such is the spell in which his senses are locked, that no sooner has the unhappy patient recovered from the paroxism of insanity, occasioned by the bite, than he seeks out the destroyer for the sole purpose of being bitten again.

I have seen a good old father, his locks as white as snow, his steps slow and trembling, beg in vain of his only son to quit the lurking place of the worm. My heart bled when he turned away for I knew the fond hope that his son would be the "staff of his declining years," had supported him through many a sorrow.

Youths of Missouri, would you know the name of this reptile? It is called the Worm of the Still.

COLLECTANEA.

Sundry rules for certain journeymen mechanics.

1. If you are employed by "the week" be particularly cautious not to work more than half the regular hours. To lay up strength against the the time of need is consonant with the dictates of reason.

2. When your employer is present, "fly round" as though you would raise the building from its foundation. But when he retires, comfortably seat yourself beside of 'Windslow's heafer.' 'Life is but a span,' and who says it should not be enjoyed?

3. Spend two hours at dinner and at the same ratio at other meals. Confinement is dangerous.

4. Spend for clothing, to cover the frame the entire amount of wages received for services.—Patriotism is a glorious attribute—and thus to patronize the merchants and tailors, is patriotism "in toto" Besides, if to the sick bed brought, you will necessarily demonstrate that to depend on kind neighbors or friends you are not too haughty.

5. If entrusted with a secret by your employer who enjoins the strongest injunctions of silence and the development of which would frustrate some well built plan of interest or lawful income; lose not a moment's time in "blabbing it into the ears of every body." That creed which allows one man to monopolise the book of knowledge is indeed small.

WOMEN.—From the creation to the present day, women have made men what they please.—If, however, any particular description of persons have been, more than others, their own, we must name Soldiers, including the heroes of ancient story. Sampson, David and Solomon, Mark Antony and Belisarius, with hundreds more, afford proof enough of this position. In later times, John Bauer, one of the best generals Europe ever knew, and an slave of the great Gustavus Adolphus, gained his glory by one woman and lost it by another. While the wife, whom he brought from Sweden, lived, he was successful in every undertaking. She accompanied him every where, regulated all his enterprizes, and pointed out the path to glory. She died, and his despair prompted him at first to follow her. At her funeral, however, the view of a lovely young German Princess checked his grief, and made him love again. Though late in life, he performed all those pranks which youth alone can render supportable. He ran extreme hazards to catch a glance of his mistress; he consumed whole nights in drinking bumpers to her health; and when he obtained her hand, he made such extravagantly noisy rejoicings, that all the country round him went to their devotions, thinking that a bloody contest was deciding in the field. His second race of love was, however, very short. He died in six weeks, having first egregiously tarnished his fame as a General, by a total neglect of his military duty.

Triumphs of Art and Science.—At the annual meeting (held a few weeks ago) of the proprietors of the Royal Institution in Liverpool, the President, Mr. Heywood, in the course of a very able address on the progress of the Arts and Sciences, illustrated it by some very remarkable facts. The thread, he observed, which, at no very remote period, required to be spun by one single factories, worked by the steam-engine, producing in one day, a length of thread which could twice encircle the globe. The art of weaving bore in its improvement close affinity to that of spinning. Within the walls of a factory, power looms, requiring little manual labour, were capable of delivering, in each minute, a piece of cloth twenty-eight yards long, and in each day a length of cloth exceeding fifteen miles. An American artist has lately invented a machine, which, when completed, would produce 60 pins in a minute.—It was curious that this manufacture should have been selected by Adam Smith as an instance of the benefit to be derived from the division of labour among many hands, when its object might now be attained almost without the labour of any. The steam engine, had, in short effected a change in the state of England, which was without a parallel in the records of either ancient or modern times. It had added the power of full two millions of men to our population. It had multiplied time itself, for it required n rest, and when the sun went down, its place could be supplied by the introduction of gas light. But what was even the steam-engine, considered as a monument of human ingenuity, to the calculating machine of Mr. Bubbage?—(In the construction of which a member of the Committee of the London Mechanics's Institution, (Mr. Le Gros) has the honour to be the person principally employed.—Goverament has, on the report of a select committee of the Royal Society, made a grant to Mr. B. of £1300 to enable him to proceed in his singularly ingenious experiments.) It promised to perform labour which had been hitherto deemed exclusively intellectual—to calculate mathematical and astronomical tables!!! The parts which performed the calculations had the disposal of no less than 30,000 numerals; and yet so perfect was the system of their combination, that should any accident create a momentary error, the immediate correction of the error was unavoidable. The power thus given to mere matter, struck the mind as incredible. Who could once have expected to find, that the work of man's hands absolutely produces a degree of mathematical correctness, which the best exertions, of his intellect have hitherto failed to obtain!—Mechanics' Magazine.

ON LOVE AND MARRIAGE.

There is but one sort of love, but, like genuine coin, there are a thousand counterfeits of it. True love is founded on esteem, as it requires something more than personal beauty to make it permanent.

Beauty of person is like an annual flower; but beauty of the mind, like a perenial one, lasts for more than a season.

Too great a disparity of years is unnatural in wedlock; if a man be double the age of a woman, old age overtakes him too soon—eight or ten years may be excused on the man's side—the half of it on the woman's is intolerable.

A sensible man seldom or never uses a woman ill, unless she throws aside her prudence, because he takes reason as his guide. The most sensible men are sometimes awkward in courtship, but shine most in the married state: they despise affectation, and had rather censure than flatter.

In short courtship, we can form no judgment of either the affection or merit of a person, length of time must evince both. Remember, but do not try the old proverb, Marry in haste, but repent at leisure.

The most unhappy marriages are the monied ones, and parents often render their own and their children's lives miserable, by persuading them to marry for convenience instead of love.

Sincerity and ingenuousness are likewise characteristics of true affection, for they that disguise their real sentiments in courtship, are always sufferers after marriage.

A set of fine words and compliments, too often deceive the fair; but a true lover will sooner tell his dulcinea her foibles than flatter her imperfections.

Wreck of a Barge in the Rapids of the St. Lawrence.

[Narrated by a respects le Merchant of Liverpool.]

On the 22d day of April, 1810, our party set sail in a large schooner from Fort George, or Niagara Town, and in two days crossed lake Ontario to Kingston, at the head of the river St. Lawrence, distant from Niagara about 200 miles.—Here we hired an American barge (a large flat-bottomed boat) to carry us to Montreal, a further distance of 200 miles; then set out from Kingston on the 28th April, and arrived the same evening at Ogdensburg, a distance of 75 miles. The following evening we arrived at Cornwall, and the succeeding night at Pointe du Lac, on lake St. Francis. Here our bargemen obtained our permission to return up the river; and we embarked in another barge, deeply laden with potashes, passengers and luggage. Above Montreal, for nearly 100 miles, the river St. Lawrence is interrupted in its course by rapids, which are occasioned by the river being confined in comparatively narrow, shallow, rocky channels;—through these it rushes with great force and noise, and is agitated like the ocean in a storm. Many people prefer these rapids, for grandeur of appearance, to the falls of Niagara. They are from half a mile to nine miles long each, and require regular pilots. On the 30th of April we arrived at the village of the Cedars, immediately below which are three sets of very dangerous rapids, (the Cedars, the Split-rock, and the Cascades,) distant from each other about one mile. On the morning of the 1st of May we set out from the Cedars, the barge very deep, and very leaky. The Captain, a daring, rash man, refused to take a pilot. After we passed the Cedar rapid, not without danger, the Captain called for some rum, swearing, at the same time, that God Almighty could not steer the barge better than he did! Soon after this we entered the Split-rock rapids by a long channel, and found ourselves advancing rapidly towards a dreadful watery precipice, down which we went. The barge slightly grazed her bottom against the rock, and the fall was so great as nearly to take away the breath. We here took in a great deal of water, which was mostly baled out again before we were hurried on to what the Canadians call the "grand bouillon," or great boiling. In approaching this place the captain let go the helm, saying, "By God! here we fill." The barge was almost immediately overwhelmed in the midst of immense foaming breakers, which rushed over the bows, carrying away planks, oars, &c. About half a minute elapsed between the filling and going down of the barge, during which I had sufficient presence of mind to strip off my three coats, and was loosening my suspenders when the barge sunk, and I found myself floating in the midst of people, baggage, &c. Each man caught hold of something; one of the crew caught hold of me, and kept me down under water, but contrary to my expectation, let me go again. On arising to the surface, I got hold of a trunk, on which two other men were then holding. Just at this spot, where the Split-rock rapids terminate, the bank of the river is well inhabited; and we could see women on shore running about much agitated. A canoe put off, and picked up three of our number, who had gained the bottom of the barge, which had upset and got rid of its cargo; these they landed on an island. The canoe put off again, and was approaching near to where I was, with two others, holding on the trunk, when, terrified with the vicinity of the Cascades, to which we were approaching, it put back, notwithstanding my exhortations, in French and English, to induce the two men on board to advance. The bad hold which one man had of the trunk, to which we were adhering, subjected him to constant immersion, and, in order to escape his seizing hold of me, I let go the trunk, and, in conjunction with another man, got hold of the boom, (which, with the gaff, sails, &c. had been detached from the mast, to make room for the cargo,) and floated off. I had just time to grasp this boom, when we were hurried into the Cascades; in these I was instantly buried, and nearly suffocated. On rising to the surface, I found one of my hands still on the boom, and my companion also adhering to the gaff. Shortly after descending the Cascades, I perceived the barge, bottom upwards, floating near me. I succeeded in getting to it, and held by a crack in one end of it; the violence of the water, and the falling out of the casks of ashes, had quite wrecked it. For a long time I contented myself with this hold, not daring to endeavour to get upon the bottom, which I at length effected; and from this, my new situation, I called out to my companion, who still preserved his hold on the gaff. He shook his head; and when the waves suffered me to look again, he was gone. He made no attempt to come near me, being unable or unwilling to let go his hold, and trust himself to the waves, which were then rolling over his head.

The Cascades are a kind of fall, or rapid descent, in the river, over a rocky channel below: going down is called, by the French, "Sauter," to leap or shove the Cascades. For two miles below, the channel continues in uproar, just like a storm at sea; and I was frequently near washed off the barge by the waves which rolled over. I now entertained no hope whatever of escaping: and although I continued to exert myself to hold on, such was the state to which I was reduced by cold, that I wished only for speedy death, and frequently thought of giving up the contest as useless. I felt as if compressed into the size of a monkey; my hands appeared diminished in size one-half; and I certainly should (after I became very cold and much exhausted) have fallen asleep, but for the waves that were passing over me, and obliged me to attend to my situation. I had never descended the St. Lawrence before, but I knew there were more rapids ahead, perhaps another set of the Cascades; but at all events, the La Chine rapids, whose situation I did not exactly know. I was in hourly expectation of these putting an end to me, and often fancied some points of ice extending from the shore to be the heads of foaming rapids. At one of the moments in which the succession of waves permitted me to look up, I saw at a distance a canoe with four men coming towards me, and waited in confidence to hear the sound of their paddles; the men as I afterwards learned were Indians (genuine descendants of the Tartars) who happening to fall in with one of the passenger's trunks, picked it up, and returned to the shore for the purpose of pillaging it, leaving, as they since acknowledged, the man on the boat to his fate. Indeed, I am certain I should have had more to fear from their avarice, than to hope from their humanity: and it is more than probable, that my life would have been taken to secure them in the possession of my watch and several half eagles, which I had about me.

The accident happened at eight o'clock in the morning; in the course of some hours, as the day advanced, the sun grew warmer, the wind blew from the south, and the water became calmer. I got upon my knees, and found myself in the small lake St. Louis, about from three to five miles wide; with some difficulty I got upon my feet, but was soon convinced, by cramps and spasms in all my sinews, that I was quite incapable of swimming any distance, and I was then two miles from shore. I was now going with wind and current to destruction; and cold, hungry, and fatigued, was obliged again to set down in the water to rest, when an extraordinary circumstance greatly relieved me. On examining the wreck, to see if it were possible to detach any part of it to steer by, I perceived something loose, entangled in a fork of the wreck, and so carried along. This I found to be a small trunk, bottom upwards, which with some difficulty I dragged up upon the barge. After near an hour's work, in which I broke my penknife, trying to cut out the lock, I made a hole in the top, and to my great satisfaction drew out a bottle of rum, a cold tongue, some cheese, and a bag full of bread, cakes, &c. all wet. Of these I made a seasonable, though very moderate use, and the trunk answered the purpose of a chair to sit upon, elevated above the surface of the water.

After in vain endeavouring to steer the wreck, or direct its course to the shores, and having made every signal (with my waistcoat, &c.) in my power, to the several headlands which I passed, I fancied I was driving into a bay, which however, soon proved to be the termination of the lake, and the opening of the river, the current of which was carrying me rapidly along. I passed several small uninhabited islands, but the banks of the river appearing to be covered with houses, I again renewed my signals with my waistcoat and a shirt, which I took out of the trunk, hoping as the river narrowed, they might be perceived; the distance was too great. The velocity with which I was going, convinced me of my near approach to the dreadful rapids of La Chine. Night was drawing on, my destruction appeared certain, but did not disturb me very much, the idea of death had lost its novelty, and become quite familiar.—Finding signals in vain, I now set up a cry or howl, such as I thought best calculated to carry to a distance, and being favoured by the wind, it did, although at above a mile distance, reach the ears of some people on shore. At last I perceived a boat rowing towards me, which being very small and white bottomed, I had for some time taken for a fowl with a white breast; and I was taken off the barge by Captain Johnson, after being ten hours on the water. I found myself at the village of La Chine, 21 miles below where the accident happened, and having been driven by the winding of the current a much greater distance. I received no other injury than bruised knees and breast, with a slight cold; the accident took some hold of my imagination, and for seven or eight succeeding nights in my dreams, I was engaged in the dangers of the Cascades, and surrounded by drowning men.

My escape was owing to a concurrence of fortunate circumstances, which appear almost providential. I happened to catch hold of various articles of support, and to exchange each article for another just at the right time. Nothing but the boom could have carried me down the Cascades without injury; and nothing but the barge could have saved me below them. I was also fortunate in having the whole day; had the accident happened one hour later, I should have arrived opposite the village of La Chine after dark, and of course, would have been destroyed in the rapids below, to which I was rapidly advancing. The trunk which furnished me with provisions and resting place above the water, I have every reason to think was necessary to save my life: without it I must have passed the whole time in the water, and been exhausted with cold and hunger. When the people on shore saw our boat take the wrong channel, they predicted our destruction; the floating luggage, by supporting us for a time, enabled them to make an exertion to save us; but as it was supposed not possible to survive the passage of the Cascades, no farther exertions were thought of, nor indeed could they well have been made.

It was at this very place that General Ambert's brigade of 500 men, coming to attack Canada were lost; the French at Montreal received the first intelligence of the invasion, by the dead bodies floating past the town. The pilot who conducted their first batteaux committing the same error that we did, ran for the wrong channel, and the other batteaux following close, all were involved in the same destruction. The whole party with which I was, escaped; four left the barge at the Cedar village, above the rapids, and went to Montreal by land; two more were saved by the canoe; the barge's crew, all accustomed to labour, were lost; of the eight men who passed down the Cascades, none but myself escaped, or were seen again; nor indeed was it possible for any one without my extraordinary luck, and the aid of the barge, to which they must have been very close to have escaped; the other men must have been drowned immediately on entering the Cascades. The trunks, &c. to which they adhered, and the heavy great coats which they had on, very probably helped to overwhelm them; but they must have gone at all events; swimming in such a current of broken stormy waves was impossible; still I think my knowing how to swim kept me more collected, and rendered me more willing to part with one article of support to gain a better; those who could not swim would naturally cling to whatever hold they first got, and of course, many had very bad ones. The Captain passed me above the Cascades, on a sack of woollen clothes, which were doubtless soon saturated and sunk.

The trunk which I picked up, belonging to a young man from Upper Canada, who was one of those drowned: it contained clothes and about £70 in gold, which was restored to his friends.—My own trunk contained, besides clothes, about £200 in gold and bank notes. On my arri al at La Chine, I offered a reward of 100 dollars, which induced a Canadian to go in search of it. He found it some days after, on the shore of an island on which it had been driven, and brought it to La Chine, where I happened to be at the time.—I paid him his reward, and understood that above one third of it was to be immediately applied to the purchase of a certain number of masses which he had vowed, in the event of success, previous to his setting out on the search.

THE TEA TABLE.

"Well, sir, I can take care of myself," said Julia Pellew to her husband, as they were taking their tea together in their little parlour, one delightful summer afternoon. Just at that moment, and while the words were yet on her tongue, the door opened, and Miss Polly Gaw entered the room, on one of her flying afternoon visits. Julia could not avoid colouring up a little at this sudden intrusion;—for this young lady's visits were always intrusive, and Miss Gaw evidently saw or suspected she had dropped in at a moment when her company was not the most desirable.—However she got herself seated, and entertained her good neighbour with a long history of the home concerns of every family in the neighbourhood, about three hours long. There was a minute and detailed account of Mrs. D's party, with a list of all who were not invited, among whom she was most careful to remind that she, Julia, was one; then the progress of the courtship in the country; the domestick squabbles of her acquaintances; the scandals of the week; the motions of the old widower who lived on the Appleby farm, betokening an approaching union with the squire's daughter, and who were jealous thereat; and a hundred other topics, equally interesting and profitable, were all spread out on this carpet.

Mr. Pellew had made his escape soon from the table, and Miss Polly did not fail to comment largely on the savage unsociability of husbands, insisting that they were as restless, and unhappy in the marriage noose as caged up tigers, and instancing how gay, and young, and spruce, they immediately become, pp losing their wives; kindly and most sympathetically adding, "if you were to drop off, my dear Julia, Mr. Pellew would in ten days, be the most gallant and agreeable man in the village." After enjoying herself, and entertaining Julia thus delightfully until it began to grow late, she gathered up her knitting, and sailed on to make a call or two more before she went home.

Mr. and Mrs. Pellew were young, had been married but about a year, and were mutually as happy in their union as love and virtue and similar tastes and dispositions could make them. He was engaged in a business, which, with industry and good management, yielded him a good living: he had embarked in it, however, without capital of his own; but Julia had a considerable amount of property, which, though the principal was not under her controul, was a basis upon which her husband was enabled to gain the credit necessary in his business, and he had done so.—This amiable family had numerous relatives and acquaintances; were looked upon by the good and sensible part of the neighbourhood as patterns of virtue, and were generally much beloved and admired.

The visit of their friend, Miss Polly, was forgotten in a day or two; but things began before long, to wear rather a strange aspect. Time after time, Mrs. Pellew observed that her visiters, who began to be much more numerous than before, put on long faces, and in a condolong strain lectured on the trials of the marriage state, the necessity of forbearance, and of the exercise of christian patience, mingled with sundry hints about the sovereign rights of the sex, and the best method of managing unruly husbands, with now and then a kind of half expressed sympathetic pity for her. She could not, for her life, understand what all this meant and attributed it to every cause but the right one.

Nor was Mr Pellew to escape this new and to him unaccountable change of the current of feeling among his neighbours, and a coldness and shyness on the part of his wife's relatives; some of them even refusing to speak to him. The female part of his acquaintance scolded at him; and, what was worse, he thought his customers began to neglect him. Day by day things grew worse—at last his creditors began to push—he was alarmed—he had never before been asked for money; his credit had been perfect—he wondered and waited for the issue; it came in half a dozen prosecutions, judgments and executions.

It was now time to rouse up. As these things were in progress, he appeared to be in utter surprise, and to view them with perfect incredulity, not being willing to believe, scarcely, the evidence of his senses. Now he demanded the cause of this strange treatment; and with some difficulty ascertained that it arose from the separation about to take place between him and his wife! and the cruel manner in which he had ed? He demanded the author of the story, and was referred to an old gentleman who had told his informer: the old man gave his wife: his wife her neighbour's wife, and so the tale might be traced down, through about five and twenty mouths, growing rather less at every step, until it came to Miss Polly Gaw—she had affirmed that she overheard Mr. Pellew and his wife engaged in a violent quarrel, and even heard a distinct affirmation on her part she would leave him.

Mr. Pellew now hit upon an expedient to bring matters to a close at once. He invited all such of his and his wife's relatives, his neighbours, his creditors, &c. as were within his reach, to meet at his house, on business of the utmost importance. —About twenty assembled, among them Miss Gaw, and a half a dozen, or more, of the principal mouthpieces in the village. He then stated to them his business; recounted the stories he he had heard; traced them all down to their origin, and demanded of Miss Polly her reasons for the report she had raised. Cornered up so unexpectedly and suddenly, she candidly confessed that the only foundation for what she had said, was, that on the afternoon she had paid the visit first mentioned, she had heard, as she entered, Mrs. Pellew say, "Well, sir, I can take care of myself."—And she wished to know if Julia Pellew would deny this. Julia replied she would not—she had barbecued a pair of fine fat quails for her husband's supper, and had been helping him to a choice bit—he had pressed her to keep it herself, saying she was too kind; and she did, on the occasion, utter the offensive words, "Well, sir, I can take care of myself."

A burst of astonishment succeeded.—Miss Gaw ran out of the room like a woman who had lost her senses. The worthy couple received the congratulations of the honest people present; and tho' the knaves shook their heads, and pretended to be mighty glad the truth had come out, it was with a grace that but half concealed their sorrow. Thereafter not a syllable was ever lisped about the before much-talked-of separation.

But thus it is, gentle reader, that one half the tea-table stories originate; and who would think there were still as many ready to believe them and trumpet them about, as there were in Aleesbury, in Molly Gaw's time.

FROM A LATE LONDON PAPER.

BOW-STREET.

JOHN BROWN.—This John Brown was a bootcloser by profession; and he had been sent to the watch-house for drinking more beer than he could pay for. He had gone into a public house some nights ago, in which house he was a stranger, and seeing nobody but a little girl in the bar, he took the liberty of walking off without paying for the beer he had drunk. On the following night he went to the same house again, thinking to fill his bowels with beer on the same economic plan; but unfortunately for him, just as he was waddling away brimful, the landlord caught him by the coat tail; and pulling him back into the house, insisted upon instant payment for all he had drank. This was a very awkward demand upon John Brown—who at the best of times is more handy at closing a boot, than closing an account, and as he declared he could not pay if he would, the landlord packed him off to the watch-house without more ado.

In his defence before the magistrate he said he was willing to pay as soon as he could, and he should not have acted so shabbily if he had not been "hellowited in liquor."

"You were drunk, were you?" said Sir Richard.

"Upon my word and honour I was," replied John Brown.

"Very drunk?" said his Worship.

"Very drunk," replied John.

"Then pay five shillings for having been so," said his Worship, "and the publican may summon you to the Court of Requests for the beer."

Poor John Brown little thought his drunken confession would have led to this sober result; but there was no help for it—the Magistrate assured him if he did not pay the fine, he should try the tread-mill for a week; and the gaoler took him away.

From the New-England Galaxy.

What have we here? A man or a fish? dead or alive? A fish—it smells like a fish. A very ancient and fish-like smell. A strange fish. Were I in England, now, and had but this fish painted, not a holiday fool there but would give a piece of silver; any strange beast there makes a man. I do now let loose my opinion—I can hold no longer; this is no fish, but an islander, that has lately suffered by a thunder-bolt.

[SHAKSPEARE—Tempest.

The Mermaid.—Of all the strange fish that visit this metropolis of notions, during election week, the Mermaid, brought here by Captain Dodge, from Manilla, is surely the strangest. A new made senator, suffering all the tortures that can be inflicted by the constitutional prefix Honorable to his christian name—a representative, newly translated from behind his counter, where he sold tea by the quarter, molasses by the pint, rum by thimblefulls, and gunpowder by the dozen—are nothing at all, great and wonderful curiosities as they are, in comparison with the Mermaid.

The question continually asked, is, Is it really and truly, bona fide, a mermaid? We answer, go and see. Examine for yourself. If the skin of a large cod-fish stuffed, with a skeleton of a child's body put on in the place of the cod's head, the jaws and teeth of a cat inserted into that which represents the head of the child, and the whole, except the scaly part, enveloped in a bladder, or some other skinny substance, and smoked well with burning camphor, can make a Mermaid, then as sure as a fish is a fish, or as certainly as Doctor Mitchill is a great philosopher and no witch, there is a Mermaid now to be seen in the room adjoining the New-England Museum, Court-street, where may be seen a great many curiosities, for the small sum of twenty-five cents. We hope that captain Dodge will not think us ill-natured, and desirous of preventing people from going to see the Mermaid. We wish to do him service, and, doubtless, the more we abuse his odd fish, the more money he gets. But, seriously, we advise him to submit it immediately to the inspection of our learned professors, who are skilled in itchyological anatomy, and procure a certificate of its character. If they will say, on their honors, after anatomizing the creature, that it is nothing more nor less than a Mermaid, he may pull in his quarters of a dollar by bushels, maugre, the Vampyre of the Ocean, the Egyptian Mummy, or even the Sea Serpent.

From Quebec papers to the 1st of June.

DISASTROUS SHIPWRECKS.

The Alexander experienced a very stormy passage, and saw many vessels much damaged. On the 1st of May saw a wreck to leeward, and bore down upon her; she proved to be the Argo, of Glasgow, with the loss of masts, bowsprit, and boats; saw no person on board—In lat. 46, lon. 38, spoke the Crown bound to Miramichie, took on board Captain Smith, with a female and boy, and three seamen wrecked in the Brig Cumberland from Liverpool to Montreal with a very valuable general cargo it is supposed of nearly £20,000. The Cumberland sailed on the 3d of April, and in a hurricane, lat. 48, lon. 57, lost eight seamed overboard, the remainder were taken on board the Crown. The vessel was abandoned a total wreck—Spoke the Horatio, Sparks, off Anticosti. 24th inst. saw the Barque Crown, which had got on shore lying at the Brandy Pots.

Intelligence per Brothers.—In longitude 38 W. fell in with the hull of the ship Argo, Capt. Murray, of and from Greenock to Miramichie, and succeeded in saving the Captain, his brother, Mr. Gilmore and two nephews, one boy and about £5000 in specie. The Minerva of Glasgow took some part of the crew, and the Brig Sarah of Maryport the remainder. The mate, two men, and one boy were washed overboard from the Argo, at the time she was dismasted.

The following particulars of the loss of the Scotia, were given by the mate of that vessel. The Scotia, Capt. Isaac Davis, sailed from the Bay of Honduras, on the 1st of April, in company with two other vessels, (the Zephyr and Glutton,) which she parted with on the 8th; on the 29th a heavy sea fell on board the Scotia, carried away her cut water and stem, and rendered her a complete wreck; all hand were immediately employed at the pumps, but their efforts were soon found to be unavailing as she soon became water-logged and unmanageable. In order to avoid the fury of the waves, which now made a fair breach over the deck, the captain, his wife and the crew, in all seventeen, were obliged to seek for shelter on the tops, into which they succeeded in carrying a quantity of provisions; here they had not remained long when, the storm increasing, the vessel upset, precipitating all into the sea; the captain and his wife were washed from their hold and lost, the remainder, by great exertion, made their way to the hull which shortly after righted from the starting of the masts, when they gained the quarter-deck, where they remained, enduring every hardship to which their melancholy situation exposed them for five days; during this time their number was reduced to ten, some were washed overboard and others died through their sufferings. On the 3d of May the wreck was fallen in with by the Saguenay; every exertion was used by the master and crew of that vessel, to relieve them from their perilous state, but owing to the severity of the weather and the imminent danger of their own vessel's falling on board the wreck, they could only succeed in rescuing four, the mate and three of the hands.

FROM MEXICO.

The schr. Eagle, arrived at Baltimore from Alvarado, left the schooner Macdonough, Ryan, of New-York, captured by the Mexican schooner Iguala, and sent in for adjudication. She was bound from Havana for New-Orleans, and had touched on the coast for water and provisions.—The brig Liberty, Myrick, of New-York, from Pensacola bound to Alvarado, with a valuable cargo of dry goods, was captured off the bar by the Iguala and sent in. Capt. Myrick reports that he had been extremely ill treated by the commander and officers of the Iguala.

The U. S. brig Spark, Lieut. Com. NEWTON, was at Sacrificios, and expected daily at Alvarado to convoy the vessels with money as far as Key West. The U. S. schooner Wenzel, Lieut. ZANTZINGER, was daily expected at Alvarado from Tampico.

Mexico remains in a perfectly tranquil state under the direction of the Sovereign Congress, who had come to the resolution of naming a dictator for the purpose of preventing further internal commotion in the country. The eyes of the nation are directed to General BRAVO, as being a proper person to fill this important station. His known patriotism and republican sentiments are a sufficient guarantee that his fellow citizens will never repent having intrusted him with this high and important command.

General FILISOLA has been appointed Captain General of the province of Mexico, and gen. ST. ANNA has been intrusted with a high command on the coast; a measure tending highly to the safety of the nation. Gen. VICTORIA remains commander in chief of the Province of Vera Cruz, with a large body of troops at his command.

News was received at Alvarado on the 14th May that Merida (the Capital of Yucatan) had joined the Mexican Confederacy and made Peace with Campeachy. In consequence great joy was expressed by salutes and displays of Flags. The coast of Yucatan as well as the Captain Generalship of that Province, was embraced in the command of Gen. ST. ANNA.

The return of Iturbide is thought possible, but highly improbable, and in any event, the consequences are not apprehended by the nation at large.

The loans that have been negotiated by the British Agents are now considered as confirmed and established; and their bills are commanding in Mexico 3s. 8d. sterling per dollar. Senor MICONS, the Mexican Agent in London, has presented his nation with his commission on the contracts, amounting to 400,000 dollars.

FALL OF LIMA, &c.

BALTIMORE, June 9.—Capt. Chaytor, of the schr. Express, arrived here this morning, in 14 days from Jamaica, reports, that accounts had been received at that place, from the Spanish Maine, bringing information that Lima and Callao had both fallen into the hands of the Royalists. Troops were collecting along the coast, viz. Carthagena, &c. to send by way of Panama to the South, as fast as possible. The Royalist force was computed at about nine thousand men, being two thousand more than the force of the Patriots. Another engagement was shortly expected to take place, and fears were entertained of the defeat of the Patriots. The British frigate Pyramis sailed from Jamaica three days before the Express, with money, for New York, to touch at Havana.

LATE FROM ANTIGUA.

By the schr. Ann, captain Tompkins, at Norfolk, from Antigua, a file of the "Weekly Register," from 27th April to 18th May inclusive, have been received. A proclamation, in the name of the King, dated 10th March, had been issued in all the British Islands, late in April, stating that, information had reached his Majesty, which caused his serious displeasure, of the insubordination manifested by the Slaves in those islands, in consequence of an erroneous impression given to them that orders had been sent out, by the King for their emancipation.

It enjoins upon them submission to the laws and dutiful obedience to their masters; and commands all the Governors of said islands to give publicity to the proclamation, and enforce the punishment of such as may disturb the tranquillity and peace of the colonies.

A long and severe drought had been experienced throughout the Island of Antigua, previous to 27th of April, when they were refreshed with seasonable showers, which promised great relief to all classes of the population.

An arrival at Boston, from Laguira, brings information, received there on the 23d April, that Campeachy was besieged by an army of 2,500 men, from Merida, and that several skirmishes had taken place between the scouting parties.—On the 25th April, all communication between Campeachy, Laguna and Champoton, was stopped. Four armed vessels from Sisal were blockading Campeachy.

Extract of a letter from an American gentleman travelling in Europe.

"I visited Geneva, and had the pleasure of making the tour of the Lake, in the steam-boat Guillaum Tell, established by an American; she is of 14 horse power, and works extremely well. I was much gratified, and felt a degree of pride and satisfaction in viewing the great improvements of my native country thus introduced, and in full operation in the interior of Europe.

"I cannot express how much I felt indebted, as an American, to the high consideration and esteem with which Com. Bainbridge's name is respected at Toulon, as it obtained for me a visit through the arsenal at that place, which is almost forbidden to strangers, without distinction. The arsenal is a grand establishment, calculated to elevate and inspire the beholder with admiration.

European Intelligence.

The packet ship Manhatten, arrived at New York, brings Liverpool papers to the 9th of May, three days later than before received.

Letters have been received in London, confirming the intelligence of the disaster at the Cape. The papers of the evening of May 6th, say—whatever hopes may be entertained as to the personal safety of Sir C. Macarthy, there can no longer be any reasonable doubts of a battle having taken place, and of its disasterous consequences. The fate of Sir Charles is still involved in mystery, and in that mystery there is still a slender hope for his friends.

The French papers of the 3d of May, contain an unqualified contradiction of the rumor of the assembling of a French naval force at Rio Janeiro.

The Unitarians' Marriage Bill was lost in the House of Lords, after much debate, on the 4th of May.

In the House of Commons, on the same day, a motion to make a loan to the people of Ireland, of one million sterling, was rejected by a majority of 85 to 38.

The number of steam-vessels employed in Great Britain, is 161. The largest in size are the London and Leith packets. The next are those which ply between Liverpool and Greenock.

Lord Cochrane is said now to be on his way to England. This determination has been hastened by the Brazilian Emperor's withholding the prize money due to the brave tars who so gallantly cleared the coast of his enemies.

Iturbide, the Ex-Emperor, with his wife and family, is yet in London, and delighted with their visits to public places, &c.

The celebrated Mrs. Fitzherbert has returned to London from Paris, and, as it is said, still retains her beauty.

The Bristol coach has performed the distance to London, (125) miles, in 11 hours. The inhabitants, in old times used to make their wills before undertaking such a journey. They ought now to get their lives insured.

A writer in a London paper thus justifies the English custom of pugilism. If two men, says he, without passion, hatred or revenge, choose to try their muscular power and skill, against each other, we conceive they have as much personal right so to do: as a corporation of alderman to challenge danger and death, by indulging and exciting the gormandizing powers of the stomach. Plethora, fat, and apoplexy, kill more of the king's liege subjects than the "Fancy" ever slew in the "Ring;" yet the law does not denominate a City Feast as a breach of the peace!

FRANCE.—On the 9th of May, Baron Marcwil, the newly appointed Minister to the United States, had a private audience with the King.

The French papers are filled with the proceedings of the Chambers. Mr. B. Constant has returned to Paris with fresh proof of the legality of his election, and with a determination to make another effort to obtain his seat in the Chamber. The law for reducing the Five per cent Stocks to Four per cents, has passed the Chamber, 238 to 145.

They have a Theatre at Calcutta which they call the "Dum Dum."—A suitable place for Pantomines.

A Company has been formed to establish a Rail Road between Birmingham, Manchester and Liverpool.

Sir John Malcolm says, that "within the last 20 years above 1000 women have been put to death as witches, in central India—Our government is endeavouring to suppress the horrid practice."

A woman was lately beheaded at Basle, in Switzerland, who, in hopes of marrying her master, poisoned his wife. She also poisoned another female whom he was about to make his second wife.

The Wonders of Printing.—The London Observer, of the 12th of January last contained two sheets, giving an account of the trial, and execution, &c. of Thurtell, for the murder of Weare: 157,000 copies of each sheet were sold—they produced the publishers fifty five thousand five hundred dollars, out of which they paid the government for stamp duty sixteen thousand dollars: they used 634 reams of paper, the weight of which was more than seven tons. If it had been printed on a press of the best construction in common use, it would have been required to work for three weeks, night and day. The presses of all the great newspaper establishments in London are worked by steam power, and the rapidity with which the operation is performed is difficult to imagine, though the fact is notorious.

Mr. Humes has given, in Parliament, notice of a motion, the object of which appears to be the reform and reduction of the Church Establishment in Ireland, where there are 5,800,000 Catholics, and only 490,000 Episcopalians. Resident Clergymen of the latter 758—non resident 581.

"I WILL SEE YOU PAID."

A case was recently decided in England, by which a debt of 122*l.* 18*s.* was recovered of a man, who casually in conversation, said you need not be afraid to trust Mr. Frost—I'll see you paid. The defendant, it seems, only intended to convey the idea, that he would see the money paid as soon as his friend could get it. But he was legally bound, by the word see, and had to pay it.

NAPLES.—The population of the city of Naples, at the end of the year 1823, according to the official statement published by the police, was 346,676, of which 182,789 were males, and 163,887 females. In this enumeration strangers were not included. The number of these was 4214. In the preceding year they amounted to 10,662. The births were 14,172, of which 1,897 were illegitimate. Deaths 12,212. Suicides only 13. Marriages 3,130.

Prospect of a rise in Nutmegs.—In the British House of Commons on the 14th of April, Mr. Hume observed, that on the western coast of Sumatra, lately ceded to the government of the Netherlands, there were 25 settlers who alone raised as much Nutmeg as was equal to the whole consumption of Great Britain. "From all we know of Dutch conduct and Dutch policy, we might be sure that the new rulers of the island would not suffer these plantations to go on a moment longer."

When the Dutch had possession of the Spice Islands, their 'policy' was, as all the world knows, to burn a great part of the crop each year, in order to keep up prices and prevent the market from being overstocked. Regaining their old possessions, it is possible they may return to their policy; but they cannot carry it into operation to as great an extent as formerly. A speculation in spices, resting on this supposition, would certainly be premature.

Standing Armies.—A late Metz Gazette states the amount of the military forces of Europe to be 2,500,000 men, including the sea and land forces. These cost annually 2,000,000,000 of francs, while the entire territorial revenue of Europe does not amount to more than 1,800,000,000 francs. About the eightieth part of the population of Europe is under arms, and each inhabitant furnishes about ten francs a year for the support of this mass of armed men, and yet all are in profound peace!

Those persons who have valuable dogs, would do well to keep them at home, as the Mayor has issued his proclamation to carry into effect the Ordinance for their extirpation. The New-York papers of Saturday contain the proclamation of Governor YATES of that state, convening the Legislature on the 2d of August next, for the purpose of considering whether the privilege of choosing electors of President and Vice President, which is now vested in the Legislature, shall be restored directly to the people.

A New York paper states that in one of the wards of that city (the eighth) about one thousand houses are now erecting. It is computed that the whole number of houses built and building during the present season will exceed three thousand.

Florida.—Accounts have been received at Pensacola, that the Secretary of the Navy had directed Com. Porter, if the situation of the service would permit, to despatch one of the vessels under his command, with instructions to St. Augustine, to take the public documents, the books and furniture of the Legislative Council from that place to St. Marks, from thence to be conveyed to the new seat of government at Tallahasse.

Accounts from Tampico Bay state, that although some of the Indians were dissatisfied with the late Treaty, there was no reason to apprehend that any hostile measures were contemplated against our military post at that station. The Grand Jury of Gadsden county, (Florida,) had presented, as a grievance, Stephen Richards the Indian Interpreter, who was in the habit of poisoning the minds of the Indians, by false representations respecting the white population of the territory, also the practice of vending spirituous liquors to the Indians.

Murder and Speedy Punishment.—An overseer of slaves, named Burwell Hancock, was killed by a slave, near Cheraw, S. C. on Wednesday the 19th ultimo. The black man complained that he was unwell. The overseer called him a sullen rascal, and punched or thumped him several times with his gun to make him go to work—the slave still refused, when Hancock gave him several blows with a stick, when the exasperated slave killed his overseer with his hoe. The slave then fled, but was pursued, taken on Friday, and on Saturday was tried by a board of freeholders, who sentenced him to be hung, have his head cut off, and his body burned. This was accordingly done, and his head stuck upon a pole and carried about as a moving monument to villainy and crime.

It is in fine preservation, and the greatest curiosity in this world. The editor of the Courier observes: "We have seen this rare curiosity, though we have not had the privilege of touching it. It is enclosed in a glass case, and, of course, impalpable to the itching fingers of the curious. As no one has asked our opinion on the genuineness of this curiosity, we are under no obligation to give it."

Western Salt.—We learn from the Troy Sentinel, that a boat has arrived in Troy, from Salina with 900 bushels of salt. The cargo was purchased by Messrs. Silliman and Grant, one of our most active and enterprising mercantile houses, and they have contracted for large quantities more. The salt is made by Mr. Byington, who has pans enough in use, we understand, to turn out 2000 bushels a month, and he is making very large additions to them. The salt is of a most beautiful clear white complexion; the chrystals are large enough to rank as coarse salt, and are uncommonly pure. We have no doubt that this salt will preserve meat as effectually as Rock salt, or any other whatever, taking an equal number of pounds of each.

American Printed Goods.—Samples of American printed cottons, from the establishment of of the Charlestown, (Mass.) Bleaching and Printing Company, have been exhibited at Providence, R. I.—The agents receive and execute orders for a single piece, if no more is wanted, that the permanency of the colours, and the durability of the goods may be more generally known.

It is stated, that more than a hundred thousand passengers have been carried in the steam boats Fulton and Connecticut, in the course of the last nine years, through the Sound, and not a person has been killed or hurt from any defect in the machinery or the management of the boats.—There is no mode of travelling known, which has proved to be equally secure. Neither stage coaches, nor even private vehicles can boast of such success.

Last year a Rattle Snake was killed on Bullard's plains, in the Parish of Feliciana, which had not less than 137 rattles. If the generally received opinion, that the number of rattles denote the age of this species of the serpentine race be correct, the snake must have been as many years old as it had rattles. The oldest inhabitants of that section of our state, had never previously seen one with more than 40 rattles. The longevity of the rattle snake, probably depends on the nature of the soil and climate in which the creature sojourns. The rattle snake alluded to was perhaps entitled to pre-emption right from the land Commissioners at St. Helena Court House, as the first settler of Bullard's plains.—Louisiana Adv.

Pensacola papers to the 16th ult. state that Col. Humphreys, Indian agent in Florida, had been in Pensacola for some weeks, and was on the eve of setting out for Washington in company of several of the chiefs, on a visit to the President of the United States. This visit, it would seem, is the consequence of instructions transmitted to Gen. Duval by the Secretary of State, to select and send to the seat of government, some of the most distinguished and important chiefs of the Florida Indians.

A quarrel, which originated between a Scotchman and a Canadian, at Montreal, became a serious affray by the interference of some Canadians first, and then by a party of Irishmen, who stepped in to see fair play. Several persons were seriously injured; one man has since died of his wounds, and the lives of two more are despaired of. The cows belonging to one of the combatants, were afterwards houghed or hamstrung by some of his opponents who carried their malice to their houses. The Montreal papers inform us that during the battle the police had the complaisance to keep at a respectful distance.

PUBLIC CALAMITY.

A letter from the Post Master at Mount St. Mary's Seminary, Emmitsburg, Md. Whitsunday night, 7th of June, says—

"Between 12 and 1 o'clock the new Seminary was found on fire in the steeple, and in spite of that could be done it was burnt down. It is supposed to have been done by design."

A letter from the city of Mexico, under date of 18th April, states that three of the persons concerned in the murder of Mr. Crawford had been apprehended. The occurrence of this murder, it is said, has had the effect of rousing the government to the adoption of measures which will afford security against similar outrages. Three assassins and highway robbers had been already executed, and twenty-four others were soon to meet a similar fate.

The most serious alarm exists among the settlers on White River, Arkansas Territory, in consequence of the movements among the Shawnees, Delawares, and other Indian tribes. Some of the old and friendly chiefs have given notice to the white inhabitants that they cannot restrain the ardor of their headstrong young men, who are resolutely bent on murdering the whites, and the strongest apprehensions are entertained that they will soon carry their savage designs into effect—The white people, as may well be supposed, are panic struck. Some of them have already left their habitations.

THE INVESTIGATION.—The Committee of Investigation met in Washington, on Monday, pursuant to adjournment—present all the Members except Mr. Randolph, of Virginia, and Mr. Owen, of Alabama—the former of whom is gone to Europe, and the latter home. No business was transacted except to adopt a general plan of proceeding in the investigation. At the request of Mr. Edwards, Langdon Cheves, of Philadelphia, and Jonathan Jennings, a member of the House of Representatives, from Indiana, have been summoned to give testimony before the Committee.

Coast Commerce.—One hundred and twenty-eight boats arrived at Albany last week, freighted as follows:—9,437 barrels flour, 2,171 do. ashes, 434 do. provisions, 94,031 gallons whiskey, 511,476 feet boards, 6,352 bushels wheat, 879 lbs. lard, 310 barrels salt, 369 feet timber, 340 cords wood, 131 tons plaster, 14,500 shingles, 380 bushels coarse grain. Cleared during the same time, 127 boats, with 611 tons merchandize, besides iron castings and sundries.

Accounts from Jamaica state, that the British frigate Hotspur, and sloop Janus had destroyed, at the Isle of Pines, two piratical feluccas and a schr.—put six of the pirates to death, and made five prisoners. Previously to their capture, the villains had succeeded in taking a gig belonging to the Janus, with a lieutenant, one midshipman, and six men—the two officers, and four of the men they put to death.

The schr. Victory, Crombie, from Malta, at Boston, was boarded on the 12th of April by the British frigate Pleiades, Capt. Starr, 8 days from Gibraltar for Malta, who ordered that he was in company when the British frigate Glasgow sunk a Turkish corvette off Algiers. The British frigates Cymbeline, Martin, and Naiad had sent in at Malta three Turkish prizes, formerly Greek property, taken by the Turks, and recaptured by the English.

"The receiving salt sea Shark."—The steward of the N. Y. packet Convoy, fell into the dock at Charleston a few days since, and was found with one leg wholly and the other partly bitten off by sharks. The late Mr. F. Rutledge was found at the same place with marks of the voracity of this species, who seems (as many observations show) to be most ravenous in southern and tropical latitudes, and, like his brother monarch of the forest, to prey on living flesh alone.

Spontaneous Combustion.—The late destruction of a Manufactory near Germantown, Penn. was caused by spontaneous combustion in waste wool. Though but twenty to fifty pounds had accumulated, yet it produced a most dense smoke, and a gas which took fire like gunpowder. The building was instantaneously in a blaze, and not an article could be saved. The oils used in the waste wool were olive and spermaceti—each kind had been so repeatedly used before without any injury, that no danger was apprehended. Repeated experiments that have been made, prove that linseed oil will regularly ignite with waste wool in twenty-four hours.

The Legislature of Connecticut adjourned on Friday week. No Senator was elected in the place of Mr. Lanman, whose term of service will expire on the 4th of March next, in consequence of a disagreement between the two Houses. An act was passed giving the choice of presidential electors to the people. A law was also passed which punishes the crime of disinterring dead bodies by fine and imprisonment in Newgate.

EXECUTION.

The Indian, called George Henry Washington, lately convicted of the murder of his wife, was executed on the 1st. inst. at Tolland, (Conn.) His appearance and behaviour ever since his imprisonment, though quiet and submissive, is stated to have exhibited something of the proud spirit and stout heart of the Indian. He said nothing at the place of execution, but previously confessed the murder, and acknowledged the justness of his sentence. He was even unwilling that an application should be made to the Legislature to commute his punishment. About 10,000 people witnessed his melancholy exit.

AMERICA AGAINST THE WORLD.

It would seem that our American artists have anticipated the atmospheric engine; and for which a patent has been obtained. This improvement is denominated a rotary shifting engine; it entirely supercedes the necessity of steam, and to which different mechanic powers may be applied, as convenience may require; but chiefly depends on atmospheric pressure. From the simplicity of its structure, and its portability, it is deemed by merchants superior for propelling vessels of any description, and for being applied to any kind of machinery, to any principle hitherto known. The expense of the machinery is merely nominal, compared with the ordinary steam engine, as no fuel is required to generate or compress the atmospheric fluid in its reservoir, the gentlemen whose united efforts have produced this truly superior improvement, and who pledge themselves for its utility; and as we say, deserve universal patronage, are, Messrs. Amos W. D. Ingo, of Hancock, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, and Junia Chittenden, of Stephentown, county of Rensselaer, New-York, to whom application may be made for rights to apply said principle to navigation or other purposes.

Printers in the U. States friendly to American improvement, are requested to give the above an insertion.

JOB SCOTT.—It will, no doubt, be gratifying to many of our readers to learn that proposals will be issued in a few days for printing two other posthumous tracts, written by Job Scott, one on "the Knowledge of the Lord, the only true God," and the other "Remarks on the Doctrine of Perseverance." The almost unparalleled acceptance with which "Salvation by Christ, &c." by the same author has been received, a large edition having been sold in a few weeks, has encouraged the editor to lay them before the public, under a full persuasion that they also will be read with much interest.

O'Halloran, or the Insurgent Chief, an Irish Historical Tale of 1798, by Dr. M'Henry, has been recently published in this city. The rapid progress making in this country in pursuit of Literature, is a proud fact for every American to know, and we hope to find that native talent will in future command that respect which it has been customary to extend towards European publications. The success of this new work, from the reception it has already met, is calculated on as certain, and we shall be happy to find that it will realize a handsome profit to the author.

The three men who were arrested near Woodbury, N. J. on suspicion of murdering Mr. Bonsall, have been taken to Chester, where they were examined on Thursday last, and recognized by Mrs. Warner, whose house they robbed at the time of committing the murder.

"Is it sickness that maketh the cheek lash so pale,
Or are they the traces of weeping and wail."

When we hear of the premature decease of a promising and healthy child, on whom its parents have looked with expectations of the fondest delight, the mind is torn by the conflicting passions of love and fear for the fate of the younger branches of our own families, and we are led to regret that existence should be composed of such tender and fragile cords, so easily decomposed by the rude north wind, or parted forever by the stern and relentless grasp of Death! Who that is a parent will not sympathise with those who mourn for the loss of their offspring, the young blossoms of hope, who have been swallowed up in the yawning waters, and no saving hand near to rescue them from their perilous situation, they become the food of fishes and worms, unless fortunately their bodies are recovered by their solicitous friends. There have been three or four instances already this summer, of young persons going out to the river Schuylkill, without the knowledge of their parents, where, venturing over their depths, not knowing how to swim, they have become victims to their own folly and disobedience. One, that has caused the most lively sensibility throughout a large and highly respectable circle of friends and acquaintances, is the fate of little Oswald Chew, about 11 years of age, youngest son of Benjamin Chew, Esq. who was drowned at Spruce street landing, on the Schuylkill, last Tuesday afternoon. He was a promising boy, and much beloved. We hope our youthful readers, will take this solemn warning, and not expose themselves so frequently as they do to the perils of the deep water.

AFRICA.—A writer in the American Daily Advertiser, observes, "As some persons, not familiar with the settlements on the coasts of Africa, may entertain fears for the principal English and American settlements there, in consequence of the victory gained by the Ashantees, and the death of Governor M'Carty, it may be proper to state, that the Ashantee nation is far remote from Sierra Leone and Messurado. It is a nation residing in the interior from Cape Coast, 3 or 400 miles below Messurado, and the cause of the battle has undoubtedly been a desire on the part of the English to get possession of its trade and especially of its gold. The Ashantees are remarkably ferocious and warlike, and possess abundance of gold. The Dutch formerly held certain parts on Cape Coast, which have recently passed into the hands of the English.—The Fantees, spoken of as slain in such numbers, resided nearer the Coast than the Ashantees, and are by no means equal to them in war.—That the Ashantees should vanquish the English and Fantees was to have been expected, but there is no reason to suppose that any danger can result either to Messurado or Sierra Leone."

The American Monthly Magazine for the present month, as usual, contains a great variety of interesting and instructive matter. Its contents may be seen in our advertising column. We take the liberty of extracting from the "Observations on Cruelty" the following passage as a just and impressive lesson to parents, in the education of their offspring, which cannot be too fully inculcated:

"Like other evils to which human nature is prone, we may impute the heinous crime of cruelty to the errors of education. It does not spring up at once, it grows with our growth. Ever too ready to temporize with our own faults, and to see quickly the faults of others; cruelty grows out of injustice, and we soon learn to give pain without compunction.

"The infant who is allowed to kill flies for his amusement, will in boyhood rob bird's nests, worry animals, and tyrannize over his school-fellows. The guardians of childhood cannot at too early an age, check the smallest propensity to seek pleasure by occasioning pain or inconvenience to any sensitive being. No slap given to a nurse that she may pretend to cry to please the chuckling babe, nor a stick given into infant hands to strike the unoffending dog, or to beat naughty puss, but tends to harden the infant heart. Above all things, cruel sights should be kept from the eyes of children. The bleeding lamb under the butcher's knife, the chickens that have eaten the crumbs from his infant hands, should not flutter in convulsive death before his eyes. Such scenes may lead him on to view without dismay the timorous hare, broken beneath the fangs of the infuriate dogs; to watch the big round tear roll down the cheeks of the hunted stag, his "leathern sides swelled almost to bursting," may fit the young spirit to find delight in all the cruelties of field sports.—He may adroitly fix the live bait upon the torturing hook, and smile to see his unsuspecting victim play round the treacherous lure, and with a dexterity worthy of a tiger, or a Roman Emperor, may dally with his poor entangled captive, until grown weary, he tears the murderous weapon from his vitals, and throws him bleeding and dying at his feet. These, and such sports as these, are excellent lessons to engraft cruelty on the young heart, before the unformed mind has felt the glorious charm of mercy. And still these trespasses on humanity are allowed as innocent pleasures; they are not at once discovered as acts of necessitous man to supply himself with allotted food, but they are soon introduced to the plastic mind as wanton sports: and the boy feels it a lordly right to tease, to kill, and to destroy. In older growth he is allowed to see dog-fights, bull-fights, and under the specious term of "The art of self-defence," he is initiated in all the mystic rules of pugilism, and consequently attends boxing matches, where he may, with the very quintessence of brutal delight, watch death-blows dealt by two human beings, whose personal courage is sacrificed at the shrine of cruelty, for the amusement of a refined multitude.

BOARD OF EXAMINATION.

The following named gentlemen have been appointed a board for the examination of Surgeon's Mates, preparatory to their promotion, viz:—

Drs. Edward Cutbush, Samuel R. Marshall Wm. P. C. Barton, Thomas Harris and Bailey Washington.

They will meet in this city, on the 14th inst.—It is understood that their attention will be directed to the investigation of moral character, and scientific and professional attainments.

We also learn that the Board is authorised to examine applicants for Commission as Surgeon's Mates, and report their fitness.

COMMUNICATION.

THE TARIFF.

The following are extracts from a Dialogue which is supposed to have taken place between an Importing Merchant and a Farmer, and published in the American Newspapers of the year 1819. It exhibits, with much precision, the connexion subsisting between Agriculture and Manufactures; and therefore will particularly interest those who are concerned for the welfare and prosperity of the nation, and who cherish the feelings of Republicanism.

Farmer. Good morning, Mr. Importer; what price will you give me for flour to-day?

Importer. I am not purchasing flour to-day, sir.

F. Why? What is the reason of that? Have you given up the export trade?

I. I suppose I need not tell you that the English government have made a corn bill to prohibit the importation of flour; and flour in all other countries of Europe, is lower priced than with us.

F. And are the English ports to be shut against my flour, and our own ports to stand open to receive their manufactured articles?

I. As far as I can see, this appears to be our fate.

F. How are we to pay for their goods, if we do not sell them our products? Are we to carry on this trade until they have drawn away every hard dollar out of the country? I say if they will not have my flour, I for one will not have their cloth: and I hope that you importers will turn your attention to importing manufactures, instead of manufactured articles, and make a market at home, and let Congress protect us farmers and our manufacturers, just in the same manner that they protect our coasting trade.

I. But would not our manufacturers impose upon us, and demand high prices?

F. Give them fair play. Let them have their own market. Give their machines two thirds of the protection that is given to our coasting vessels: and the competition among them will soon be such as will reduce the prices low enough.

I. But have you forgotten the prices they charged you during the last war?

F. No—I have not; nor have I forgotten the price you and all the importers charged me. You importers actually charged higher prices during the late war, than our own manufacturers charged, and that too, without any good reason; because you importers having paid no advanced price for the goods you had on hand, you might have sold for the old prices, but you would not.

I. Surely we had a right to sell our goods for the highest price we could obtain.

F. And did not our manufacturers possess the same right? I sold my wool to our manufacturers during the war, for more than double the price I now get for it. And, if I were to estimate the whole of our clothing together, for wife, daughters, and all, I should find the expense very near as much now as during the war; because some of your imported articles do not wear half so long as our own homespun stuffs.

I. And would you suffer your daughters to wear domestics?

F. Would I suffer! I should rejoice to see the whole of my family, wife, daughters, and all, clothed from head to foot, every day, Sundays and all, in nothing but domestics. But you import all sorts of new-fangled fashions with the foreign articles, and there is no end of the expense attending this everlasting love of variety and change of fashion.

I. There is some truth in what you say. With Leghorn bonnets, merino shawls, and other foreign follies, I find my family expenses in what is denominated clothing, nearly as great now as during the war.

F. But only think of the folly of having our manufactories in foreign countries. When my neighbours had their manufactories all in full operation, I received from them and their workpeople—213 dollars a year for milk; 159 do. do. more than I now get for butter; 65 dollars for turnips, potatoes, cabbages, &c.; 305 dollars more for mutton, lamb, beef, veal and pork; 525 dollars for fire-wood and hauling; 200 dollars for hauling for the manufactories; and double the price I now get for my wool. But since the manufactories have nearly all been ruined by imports, I have not received a single dollar for milk, fire-wood, or hauling, except, alas! for hauling some of their furniture away from the factories on the creek, after it had been sold by the sheriff.

By reading the above Dialogue, we are inevitably led to deprecate that policy which leaves us at the mercy and subject to the caprice of the Nations of Europe, who have invariably been hostile to our Manufactures, and which tends to impoverish us by leaving them at liberty of determining the terms of exchange between us. The difficulties under which we laboured during the embargo and the late war, are again brought before us, while our recollection convinces us that we are in less hazard of being imposed upon by Manufacturers, in the prices, than by Importers. An allusion is also made to that decided preference which ought to be given to American fabrics by every true patriot. A valuable hint is furnished to farmers, to diminish their stock of hogs, and increase that of sheep—to sow more flax and hemp, and less grain; as also of the folly of having our manufactories at so great a distance, so that the expense, risk, and delay, not to mention the impositions and foreign duties attendant on having our work-shops on the other side of the Atlantic, (a distance of 3000 miles,) as also the number of hands occupied in transporting them, together with 25 per cent. from the present stock of our Merchants: all which might be dispensed with, by preferring Domestic Manufactures to foreign fabrics, which, in itself, is sufficient greatly to aid the manufacturing community, and with that the nation at large, by rendering their lives more useful to their generation. There is also presented in the Dialogue, an overwhelming deficit in the Agricultural account, in the aggregate of the losses which our Farmers are annually sustaining, under the late duties, and which, in a measure, explains the cause of the difficulties under which we labour at present.

The stock of the Bank of the United States, says the National Intelligencer, has been steadily advancing for some time past, until it has attained a point of appreciation not only much above what it has been at any previous period since its great depression, at the close of the first administration of the institution, but which looks like an approximation (though from different causes) towards the inflated value which speculation attached to it in the first years of its existence. Large sales have been made at New York as high as 22½ per cent. above par, and that is the price at which the stock is last quoted in most of the eastern cities This advance is not the effect of reckless speculation, but of the prosperous condition of the institution, the abundance of capital in the commercial cities, and the increased confidence of moneyed men, in the Bank, as a safe and profitable institution for the investment of surplus capital. The large loan lately effected by the Bank to the Government for the payment of the Spanish claimants, and the probability of others, which it is known the Government contemplates negociating, in the reduction of the public debt, have doubtless had considerable influence in raising the stock of the Bank to its present price, and these causes, combined, may carry it even much higher.

A work, entitled "Connecticut, Forty years since," has just appeared, and is spoken favourably of, by those who have perused it.—It affords a great diversity of characters, and historical facts are blended with fiction, in a manner calculated both to amuse and instruct.—"The scene of the book is laid in Norwich, a Town remarkable for the beauty of its scenery, as well as for the military operations which have been carried on in its vicinity, from the storming of Fort Griswold at Grotten, back to the days of the Mohegans and Narragansetts.

Jamaica Papers to the 11th ult. mention the introduction of the Small Pox into that Island, from the city of New York, where it was reported to be raging. It was rumoured at Cuba that Porto Cabello was to be blockaded, and a descent to be made on Maracaybo.

We can state from good authority, says a Liverpool paper, that Mr. Kean has offered to guarantee Mrs. M'Gibbon 1000 pounds, clear of all expenses, provided she and her husband will accompany him to America.

Mr. Webb, the Irish Comedian, is also said to have received an invitation for America.

Mr. Dowton, we understand, is about to visit the United States. It is repeated that Mr Price the American manager, offered Mr. Braham ten thousand pounds, secured on the Bank of England, for twelve months' engagement.

Extract of a letter to a gentleman in Philadelphia.

"Gen. La Fayette has concluded to go to the United States. The old gentleman says he is at a loss to express his feelings upon the occasion. He, however, declines the honor of going in a national ship, and will take passage in one of the Havre Packets. He is not quite certain what time he will embark, but I think some time in June or July.

REMEDY FOR THE PILES.

THE Medicine now offered to the public, before which has been fully subjected to the infallible test of experience; and in every instance where it has been fairly tried, it has been attended with the most complete success. It is not (like those usually advertised,) offered as a certain cure, for a long catalogue of diseases, but those afflicted with this complaint, for which alone it is recommended, may rely with confidence upon obtaining relief even in its worst forms, in a short time; and they themselves are the best judges of the importance of such a remedy. ANDERSON'S COUGH DROPS

AND PECTORAL POWDERS,

AS prepared by JAMES MELLEN of Boston, are known by many thousands who have tried them in the United States and in Canada, to be one of the best Medicines in use, for Coughs, Asthma and pains about the Breast, and other affections of the lungs, leading to Consumption; a very few doses will often, if used in season, allay the irritation and effect a cure, if high fever or inflammation does not exist, to accomodate the public, they are sold in Fifty Cents and One Dollar vials, and have the words "Prepared by I. Mellen," stamped on them, and I. Mellen, in writing, signed at the bottom of each printed direction, and no other medicine is entitled to the Certificates of Moses Kimball, Christopher Cook, or Stephen Seaman, notwithstanding some person has taken the liberty to apply them to what he calls Anderson's Cough Drops, signed D. Smith, Send by S. Potter & Co. but the public may consider it a deception to profit by, as all those cures were performed by the Cough Drops prepared by I. Mellen.

And as a further proof of the efficacy of said Mellen's Cough Drops, which are called Anderson's, in New-York and the Eastern States, the following certificates are added:

NEW CERTIFICATES.

I Hereby Certify, That for more than a year previous to 1821 I was afflicted with a troublesome and alarming cough, which rendered me unable to labor or even to walk many rods without causing profuse sweating, and after trying many things without relief, I obtained a Vial of Anderson's Cough Drops, prepared by I. Mellen, from the use of which I soon found great relief, so as to be able to resume and continue my usual labor, and I have reason to believe that the use of them was the means of saving my life, as I had but little hopes of recovering again when I commenced taking them; and I think them undoubtedly the best medicine in use for complaints of the lungs. ELISHA DAVIS

Having made use of Anderson's Cough Drops in my family, and having been requested to express my opinion of their efficacy in the cure of coughs, I hereby certify, that a daughter of mine was severely afflicted with a cough for about a year previous to the summer of 1820, during which time she was more or less attended by several physicians; but, appearing to obtain no relief, her life was despaired of. Being informed of the great cures effected by Anderson's Cough Drops, as prepared by J. Mellen, and I did so, and to my surprise, I was very soon entirely relieved, and felt no more of it for six months. Upon a return of the paroxysm of the Asthma, I have made use of the same medicine, and it has invariably given me relief. A few cents the asthma, and its attendant symptoms, difficulty of breathing, &c. I consider Anderson's Cough Drops a remedy, in praise of which too much cannot be said. I further certify, that my son-in-law had for some time been supposed to be past recovery of a Consumptive complaint, when I advised him to make a trial of Anderson's Cough Drops, and from the use of them, he has so far recovered his health as to be again able to attend to his business. JOHN LYSCOM, Surgeon.

Variety's the very spice of life,
That gives it all its flavour.

VILLIAM VICKS;

OR, DO AS OTHER PEOPLE DO.

Von Villiam Vicks, as I've heard tell
A vintner vas at Clerkenvell;
His vife she vas a vixen vile,
And oft poor Vill she vould revile,
Forever vanting something new,
She'd cry, 'Dear Vill, I vish as you,
Vould do as other people do;'

There's neighbor Vink's, they keeps a shay,
And ven they vants to dash away,
And vie with all the beaux and belles,
Away they vhip to Horsney Vells!
Then since ve all vant something new,
Dear Villiam Vicks, I vish as you,
Vould do as other people do!

'Vat now?' says Vill, 'vat vant you next?'
'Vy Vill, I vow it makes me vext,
To think ve live in dirt and filth!
A COUNTRY HOUSE vould save my health;
And here's a spot with charming woo;
Dear Villiam Vicks, I vish as you,
Vould do as other people do!

The house was bought and Madam now
Must have a coach, and servants too;
A pair of geldings, smooth and sleek,
And routs and parties thrice a week,
And ven poor Vill impatient grew,
'Dear Vill,' said she, 'you know that you
'Must do as other people do!

But now Vill's cash run very brief,
So Vill turned o'er another leaf,
The maids dismiss'd; the house was sold;
And coach and horses too we're told;
'Lord Vicks! she scream'd 'vat shall ve do?'
'In troth,' says Vicks, you know that you
'Must do as other people do!

Ma'am did not like this change of life;
So death vipt off poor Vick's vife—
And now, retrieving his affairs,
Most Christian like his loss he bears,
And when you ask him, 'How' d'ye do?'
Vill cries, 'Indeed to tell you true,
'I do as other people do!'

AN EXQUISITE.—A few years ago, a traveller arrived at an inn in Liverpool late in the evening. Being shown into the room appropriated for gentlemen of the road, he, with great pomposity, enquired, whether the travellers were all gone to bed? "Yes, sir," says the waiter, "except that gentleman," pointing to one at the other end of the room, apparently preparing to retire. "Waiter," says the newly arrived gentleman, "be quick, and let me have a cold fowl for my supper." The cloth was immediately laid, the fowl brought in, and the gentleman lounged into his chair. "Waiter, I say, cut up that there fowl." He did so. "Put the two wings and the breast on my plate." He did so. "Put some salt on my plate." He did so. "Cut the fowl on my plate into pieces." This he did also.

The solitary being, before alluded to, having observed the proceedings of the gentman, now said, "John, let me have a cold fowl for my supper," (imitating the manner of the lounger.)—The fowl was brought. John, being requested, cut it up, helped him to the breast and wings, salt, &c. and cut it into pieces for him. "John," said he, "put a piece into my mouth." "John, wag my jaws for me." "John, being aware of the joke, complied with his request. The traveller immediately left the room, and was no more seen at the inn.

MR. POPE.—One evening, at Burton's coffee house, Mr. Pope, (who was remarkably crooked,) and a set of literati, poring over a manuscript of the Greek poet Aristophanes, found a passage they could not understand. A young officer, who stood by the fire, begged that he might be permitted to look at the passage. "Oh!" says Mr. Pope, sarcastically, "by all means, satisfy the young gentleman's curiosity." The officer, considering awhile, said there only wanted a note of interrogation to make the passage intelligible. Piqued at being out-done by a red coat, "Pray," says Pope, "what is a note of interrogation?" "A note of interrogation," replied the youth, "is a little crooked thing, that asks questions." Pope was so much pleased with the conceit, that he forgave the sarcasm on his person.

Rare instance of Conjugal Affection.

An instance of real and permanent conjugal affection was produced in evidence at Somerset sessions, (which commenced on Tuesday week) which has never perhaps been paralleled in the annals of humanity. In an appeal cause, a woman who was there as a witness swore she had never lost sight of her husband for 12 hours together at any one time either day or night, during a period of 30 years.

One thing at a time.—When Lord Howe was Captain of the Magnanime, a negro sailor was ordered to be flogged. Every thing being prepared, and the ship's company assembled to witness the punishment, the Captain made a long address to the culprit, on the enormity of his crime. Poor Mungo, tired of the harangue, and having his back exposed to the cold, exclaimed, "Massa, if you floggee, floggee; or, if you preachee, preachee; but no floggee and preachee too!"

Fill a wine glass to the brim with water, and cover it with a piece of writing paper, then place the palm of the hand over the paper, so as to hold it even, and turn up the glass, when, although the hand be removed, the water will not run out—This effect is wholly produced by the upward pressure of the external air upon the surface of the paper.

The height of happiness, beyond all doubt, is to enjoy in the same person the delights of love and the pleasures of friendship; and to find in that person an affectionate wife and faithful friend; no other felicity comparable to this, can the present life afford.

EXTRACT.—Nothing defeats the malice of an enemy like a spirit of forbearance: the return of rage for rage cannot be so effectually provoking. True gentleness, like an impenetrable armour, repels the most pointed shafts of malice. they cannot pierce through this invulnerable shield, but either fall hurtless to the ground, or return, to wound the hand that shot them.

SOAP MAKING—BY THE "COLD PROCESS."
From the American Farmer.
Albemarle, Va. May 15, 1824.

Mr. Skinner: It is my custom, in reading over your valuable journal, whenever I come across any article relating to domestic economy, to read it out to my wife, who, you must know, is a notable manager, and great economist. In the fourth number of the Farmer, a process of making soap is detailed by a housekeeper, of simply mixing the ley and grease together, and placing it in the hot sun, without any boiling. When I read this account to her, which is wound up by the emphatic inquiry, on your part, "Can th a be true?" "True, said she, certainly, it is true; I have made soap in no other way for three years, and I believe every body in this neighborhood does the like—only I do not take the trouble to measure the ley and grease, and set it in the hot sun, but I put my barrel, (a common fish barrel, in the cellar where it is intended to stand, and fill it nearly full of strong ley, then add as much grease, without melting it, as I think sufficient, stirring it once every day or two. In a few days I can tell whether I have put too much or too little grease, and add ley or grease, as the case may require. In two or three weeks it becomes excellent soap. We call it the process. In this way we make better soap, get rid of the trouble and risk of boiling, and can make it as suits our convenience, or occasion requires. And I wish, my dear, that you would write to Mr. Skinner, and tell him, from me, that it is true."

INDIAN INFIRMARY,

No. 70 North Fifth street, Philadelphia.

DR. SMITH, son of the Old Indian Physician, late of Baltimore, begs leave to assure the public, that he feels a high sense of gratitude for the liberal patronage he has met with, in his practice in many of the cities throughout the United States, as an Indian Physician. In particular Baltimore, his last residence, he can truly, and with heartfelt satisfaction, use the words of Holy Writ: that with the assistance of Almighty God, he has been the instrument of opening the eyes of many who were entirely blind, of unstopping the deaf ear, enabling the lame to walk, and bestowing to the sick and infirm universal relief and consolation from their sufferings.

The knowledge and skill of the Indian Physician in the Healing Art, is the result of being born and raised among the Sons of the Forest, from whom he was taught to unfold the Book of Nature, and peruse its instructive pages; by which he has been enabled to select and prepare medicines, from the bosom of our Mother-earth, who is ever pregnant with plants of her own fostering, to cure all diseases, which are curable in their nature and state.

Dr. Smith, from his intimate association and early study with the Indian habits, manners and practices, is well acquainted with the languages spoken by the Six Nations, which has enabled him to pursue his researches with every advantage and success, as his practice and numerous testimonials will abundantly prove.

The Indian Physician has engaged an assistant, which will enable him to devote unremitting attention to those patients who may fall under his care.

The poor and penurious are invited to call at the Indian Infirmary, in the morning, between sunrise and eight o'clock, and they will be healed gratis. After which time, until evening, all other persons will be waited upon; from whom a reasonable remuneration will be expected upon receiving counsel and the delivery of medicines.

Convenient apartments will be prepared for private and confidential consultations.

N. B. Dr. Smith will constantly keep a supply of Medicines for the cure of most diseases, carefully prepared by himself, with proper directions, at his residence, No. 70 North Fifth street, Philadelphia. march 27—3m

SWAIM'S PANACEA.

THIS valuable Medicine has obtained a distinction which its efficacy alone can support. As a purifier of the blood it has no parallel. It is the most useful spring and autumn alterative ever known. All those who are affected with Scrofula, Leprosy, Scurvy, or cutaneous Eruptions, or any of those melancholy diseases arising from impurity of the blood and juices—also, those who suffer by diseased Liver, Rheumatic affections, or from indiscretion of their youth, or those whose constitutions are broken down by mercurial, antimonial, or arsenical medicines, should submit to a course of Swaim's Panacea. The effect of this Medicine is such as not to interrupt either business or pleasure, and requires only the common restraints of moderation in diet. It is conveyed by the circulating fluids, and corrects their tendencies to all those diseases which originate in vitiated blood. It is a safe, though a powerful substitute for mercury, and removes those evils which an unsuccessful use of that mineral so often occasions, &c.

CERTIFICATES.

"I have, within the last two years had an opportunity of seeing several cases of very inveterate ulcers, which, having resisted previously the regular modes of treatment, were healed by the use of Mr. Swaim's Panacea; and I do believe, from what I have seen, that it will prove an important remedy in scrofulous, venereal and mercurial diseases.

CAUTION TO PURCHASERS.

The great demand and wonderful success of this medicine, has induced a number of persons to imitate it in various ways. Some are selling Sarsaparilla and other syrups, imposing them on the ignorant for the Panacea; others are mixing the genuine medicine with molasses, &c. making three bottles out of one—thus retaining some of its virtues. These imitations and adulterations have, in many instances, protracted the sufferings of patients, in cases where the genuine medicine would have proved instantly efficacious.—I therefore deem it a duty I owe the public, to acquaint them, that it is impossible, from the very nature of its constituents, to be discovered by chemical analysis; and, consequently, that all other mixtures represented to be mine, and sold as such, are fraudulent and base impositions, calculated to deceive the ignorant and unwary. The genuine medicine has my signature on a label, representing Hercules and the Hydra, and my name on the seal.

Price 3 dollars 50 cents per bottle, or 36 dollars per dozen. Communications, post paid, and orders from any part of the world, will receive immediate attention.

THAT very prevalent misfortune, the loss of the Upper Front Teeth, induces the Subscriber to believe that the following communication upon the subject of decayed Teeth will be found deserving of an attentive perusal.

The upper front Teeth are destroyed by pressure, and the only way known to give them room to grow is by filing or by extracting certain sound Teeth. The front Teeth in the under jaw are open by nature and do not decay.

After the mortification in the upper front Teeth has progressed inwardly for about two years, where there is no enamel to stop its progress, a resemblance appears between them outwardly, and the Teeth are very liable to break off, leaving the Stumps in the gums.

When a Tooth is first broken off, a Tooth can be fixed on its Stump so nicely as scarcely to be known from a natural Tooth, and the pivot will answer the purpose of a plug and prevent further decay in the Stump; but if the Stumps are neglected the owner will lose the benefit of having Teeth fixed in the mouth in the best way known, the way nearest to nature.

Great advantage attends fixing the Teeth in the mouth on Stumps; they never injure shooting Teeth, and when necessary to give pain, which seldom occurs, the Dentist can always inform before hand.

When one tooth is front broke off, the stump is often neglected—but when more than one tooth breaks the inconvenience is truly serious, and the unfortunate person is sure to lament his great and irreparable misfortune, that he did not know the importance of an early application to the Dentist, as by this time the Stump of the Tooth first broken becomes so curious as to render the fixing a Tooth firmly on such decayed Stumps an operation of great difficulty.

The Teeth the advertiser furnishes are very strong and serviceable and do not lose their pivots, nor their colour, nor injure the breath, and only require to be seen to be approved.

Amazing advantage attends plugging decayed teeth with gold—the operation gives no pain. The plug protects the nerve, prevents further decay and the pain of Tooth Ache—one ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

It is of the first importance that the Teeth be from time to time cleaned with proper instruments, or the scurvy tartar, or what soon produces that scurvy in the gums, will force the gums from the Teeth, and even destroy Teeth that have room given them to grow by nature.

The Advertiser extracts the most difficult Stumps with great safety and with so little pain as is sure to astonish every one, and continues to perform every operation in the line of his profession, on his well known moderate terms. He also fixes Teeth on decayed Stumps, in a way more accurately than hitherto discovered.
